

Tarun Tahiliani's 'new democrazy'
3 September 2011

Taking from our draped tradition, Tarun Tahiliani's new menswear collection goes the "new democrazy" way by exploring structured draping in jackets, waistcoats and all sorts of tunics.

India re-interpreted with a variety of techniques, the new collection presents Tussar, stretch, wools, cotton linen and voiles in a blend of draped and twisted forms, presenting the modern fakir or the world traveller.

The collection looked forward to a sensual contemporary interpretation of Indian fashion in a variety of black, beige, roan, greige and a range of shades of ecru and taupe.
