Novo Nordisk launches once-a-week insulin Icodec to India

SOHINI DAS

Mumbai, 18 May

Novo Nordisk, the leader in the Indian insulin market, has launched more novel products here from its global research and development pipeline. The once-a-week insulin Icodec, which needs to be taken only once a week, is the first of its kind in India.

Speaking to Business Standard, Vikrant Shrotriya, vice-president for India, said India is one of the key markets for the Danish drug major, and it will continue to bring more products here.

He added that the products are first launched in India and then in the US and parts of Europe. However, the products will come to India within six-12 months of their global launch.

Icodec, for example, is in phase-3 clinical trials, and the firm announced headline results from its phase-3 trial, achieving its primary endpoint of demonstrating non-inferiority in reducing blood glucose (HbA1c) at week 26.

If this insulin is available globally next year, then India will also have it soon. As such, Shrotriya said Indian patients will benefit from the global trial, and this should make the process of regulatory approval easier. "India is most likely to be the first market for our new products. We have around 200 clinical trial centres in India, and this is ongoing here," he said.

He added that Novo Nordisk will also bring its obesity drug Wegovy to India. India's insulin market is estimated to be around ₹1,000 crore and is growing at an annual growth rate of 10 per cent. India's oral diabetes market is clocking at a CAGR of 11 per cent. Torrent Pharma's Novo Nordisk in Gujarat from the crystals that are imported to India.

India is estimated to have 77 million diabetics, most of whom are on chronic medication. Around 30 per cent of the diabetics in India are on insulin, thus making India one of the most coveted markets for insulin globally.

As for obesity, at the moment an oral drug – a long-acting GLP-1 receptor agonist – is in phase-3 clinical trials.

There are two more obesity drugs in phase-1 and phase-2 clinical trials.
